BULLHEAD CITY — An anonymous donor has played matchmaker, helping a relationship blossom between the City of Bullhead City and the manufacturer of functional and artistic products made from recycled wind turbine blades.

Bullhead City Community Park received a donation of six park benches — valued at more than $33,000 — from Canvus, Inc., which turns decommissioned windmill blades into benches, tables, planters and other indoor/outdoor furnishing. The donor was identified by the city only as someone "from the renewable energy industry" who was involved in an agreement with Canvus.
